What is the state of our surface waters, groundwater, and drinking water in Luxembourg? What needs to be done?

Dr. Marc Hans will present the current situation in the water sector and the administration's main areas of work. Afterwards, an open exchange is planned, which will likely address, among others, the following topics:

- Condition and development of surface waters and groundwater: Is Luxembourg achieving its objectives in this area? What role do the different actors play? How can we move forward together?
- Drinking water quality: What about contamination by “forever chemicals”?
- Development of groundwater reserves: Have they been replenished or not yet?
- Security of supply: Can our water reserves cope with a growing population and the country's economic development? How resilient is the water supply and how can we guarantee it in the long term?
- Implementation of renaturation projects: What are the challenges? How can they be implemented more quickly?
- Progress with wastewater treatment plants: keyword microplastics?
- How to deal with climate change in the water sector? For example, the concept of the “sponge city”.

Thank you for attending the congress! Thank you also for informing us in advance if you will attend, as this greatly facilitates the organization (meco@oeko.lu)

Kind regards
